Position Open

We had a great banquet again this year. Many awards given out including the new Dog of the Year awards:

Tony and Liz Oster Conformation Dog of the Year

Linea and Melissa McIntyre Rally Dog of the Year

Cajun and Mary Bente Obedience Dog of the Year

Bella and Sarah Falk Scent Work Dog of the Year

Gaetho and David Mielke Herding Dog of the Year

President's Awards were given to:

Candace James

Kim Morris

Larry Sacevich

We had flappers and a costume contest won by Amber Danielowski. There were games and prizes and Mike had playing cards made up with pictures of our dogs.

Due to weather problems, some people could not attend and we are looking into moving the banquet to March. This will require changes to some of the club By-Laws.

As usual, we have many events coming up. On March 14 we will have an Intro to Barn Hunt and Dock Diving at For the Love of Dogs in Mendota Heights. See the information on page 17. On March 20 we have a practice for the AKC Temperament Test at 7:30 after rally class. The Spring Agility Trial is March 27-29. On May 20 we have a Herding Fun Day where you can see your dog show his or her instinct to work with sheep. Phyllis Clark will handle the dogs for you.

Our specialty weekend is May 29-31. Followed by the Scent Work Trial June 6-7 and the GSD Fun Day June 14.

Kim Morris has searched high and low for judges for a spring Obedience/Rally trial and the date is set for June 20 and 21 at Animal Inn.

Training Tips from Ron Halling

There's a challenge going on in the dog world right now about training for ten days straight and see what your dog can do. Or, you can train your dog everyday as a way of life. If you incorporate your training with fun activities you get a dog that loves to "work" and thinks it's as much fun as playtime.

Here's Ron's Lucie out for a walk in the woods for an exercise walk. Ron stops the walk, finds a stick and "plays" fetch/jump with his dog retrieving over some brush about 24" tall. Lucie gets so excited she's jumping right out of the picture frame she's having so much fun. After enthusiastic praise for a "job" well done they continue their walk. Think how she'll feel when they move indoors in a classroom setting for formal obedience retrieve over the high jump? Fun or no fun?

This is the basis of our training. The emphasis is having fun while training! Try it if you aren't already and have a dog that thrives to work and you both walk away with smiles on your faces!

As we train our dogs we should always teach them "back". This should be done from a sit, (can do this from your couch potato position with your gentle toes to the chest move), a stand and a down.

When preparing for Open, specifically the drop on recall, it's important your dog doesn't crawl when told to drop. Each foot movement is $\frac{1}{2}$ to 1 point depending on the judge. When told to drop the dog should drop right there in the judge's mind! To help accomplish this we teach our dogs to drop back into position. In the beginning we can help them by gently pushing them back into a down with a hand placed on their front shoulders when first teaching the down. Later it may help to put something in front of their legs to accomplish a drop without crawling forward.

Then, when teaching the drop on recall we say the "drop" command simultaneously followed by the "back" command, "dropback". Your dog should drop and back up a step at the same time accomplishing the beautiful drop on a dime command we're looking for.

You're a GOOD dog only at home?

by Amber Eisfeld

One of the many reasons I teach classes outside is for the exact reason listed in this title. Clients tell me all the time their dog only listens to them at home or only at obedience class that is held indoors. As soon as they hit the outdoors or somewhere else in the community, their dog does not listen. I wrote this blog to help you with this as you progress through your training.

Think about your favorite local restaurant chain. You love how the restaurant is designed, the food is great and always comes out fresh. The staff are always happy and you always have a great experience at your local restaurant. You go across town to the same restaurant chain and you find the layout to be different, the menu different, and the whole entire experience...different. Not what you expected right?

Apply this same concept to your dog when you are training!

The first thing you need to know:

Dogs are situational which means what you teach them in one environment is not directly translated to the next environment. Every new command or exercise you teach a puppy or dog has to be trained in different environments for them to learn...sometimes going back to the basics even though you may think they know the command.

Helpful Tip #1: Train your dog in a low distracted environment so he has the opportunity to learn what you are asking him. When you have practiced at home and then go to a class and your dog does not listen it is not always because they are choosing not to. Sometimes they simply do not know what you are asking. The 7 other dogs in the class are a distraction and that distraction is real. It's also way more fun than being at home where it's just you and your dog training.

Helpful Tip #2: Move at a pace that is comfortable for you and your dog. Once your dog learns it in your house and 10 out of 10 times he does correctly...it's time to bring it out into your backyard (or another new environment).

- This is where you can help your dog be successful. Bring in those higher value treats. Check out my blog regarding higher value treats. Don't start with major distractions and always jackpot for when the dog has done something correctly in a new environment.
- Make sure your dog understands what you are asking. If you have not done an off-leash recall at home don't expect them to do that in your new environment. Remember all exercises you are working on in the new environment should be ones that he already knows and you can now take baby steps to work them in the new environment.

Helpful Hint #3: You have to have patience. Learning all of these exercises in different environments is hard. Only ask your dog what you know is achievable.

Rally Change

Change in #314 was just adding the graphic of the 3 accepted directions for executing the Cloverleaf.

It's nice to see the 3 different directions. The judge decides which one to use at a Trial, and all exhibitors do the same one for their Master course.

A good way to not be confused is to make sure you do the following: Enter the exercise on the right side of #1. Cross the center, then look for #2. Go around #2, then cross center, then look for #3. Go around #3, then cross center, then look for #4. Go around #4, then cross center, then look for #1. You will exit to the right of #1 (as you face it when crossing center).
