Position Open

We are working on planning the next block of lessons, projected to start in January. We have all heard that there are new rules put into effect to try to stem the Covid 19 Pandemic and I confirmed today what the rules are at the Animal Inn. The building is limited to no more than 33 people who all must wear masks, not face shields. If a person is unable to wear a mask, they are not allowed in the building.

We have nominations for all the officer and board positions but if you want to throw your hat in the ring for the various positions coming up this year. contact Laura Meyer blcmeyer920@msn.com, We have openings for President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, and two board positions. Nominations close at the December membership meeting.

Plans are in the works for 2021 Agility trials, Specialty shows, Obedience/Rally trials, The GSD Fun Day, Herding Fun Day, Scent Work Trials, and Herding Trials. We have the banquet to look forward to in March also. Of course, all is dependent on the Covid 19 situation.

We held scent work classes with Holly Bushard in October and it was a lot of fun. We have an ORT class and Mock Scent Work Trial with Linda Spengler on Friday November 20. I had descriptions of these classes in the last issue. If you missed it, you can find all the Shep-O-Gram issues on the club web site, GSDCMSP.ORG. If you are interested in registering please contact Kim Morris kmorris4369@hotmail.com. If you are not in a smorgasbord block, the fee is $30 per class.

Dawn Fisher has graciously taken on chairing the Scent Work Trial this spring.

Amber Eisfeld has provided an article on training for this issue and we have an article on Thanksgiving foods to avoid giving your dogs. There is new information on Ron Halling's workshops too.

Stay Healthy!

Scent Work Seminars with Holly Bushard

Holly Bushard, scent work judge and trainer gave two classes for the club introducing dogs to odor and searching. Dogs learned to search for treats and odor in a container in a small bowl. The second class introduced dogs to searching for odor located under chairs and tables.

The importance of consistency in dog training by Amber Eisfeld

1. Consistent cues in dog training

If you repeat cues and say it one time one day, and three times the next, you are not consistent. For more effective communication and training with your dog, try to make your verbal, as well as non-verbal, cues consistent. It makes it much easier for your dog to learn new commands or tricks.

2. Keep the daily routines

Dogs are each day confronted with challenging and confusing situations: They have to wait patiently for their food, stay calm while walking and sometimes stay home alone for hours. With fixed daily rituals you can teach your dog that these situations are normal parts of the day and, with time, your pup will get use to these challenges as a part of his daily routine. Even with the pandemic your dogs routine should not change much. It is extremely important to continue the routines as well as how often your dog is crated.

3. Stay on the same page

Make sure every one in the family is on the same page with all of the “house rules”. If you don’t want your dog to jump on people, make sure he NEVER gets rewarded for jumping. If you don’t want your dog to beg for food while you eat, the whole family should know not to feed him from the table or give him scraps. Dogs often get blamed for being “stubborn” because they are not behaving properly. The problem, however, is not the dogs. It is often seen that each family member rewards different behaviors. What is the right answer? Make consistent rules and stick to them.

4. Dogs don’t generalize

If you teach “sit” in the kitchen and then move to the bed room, your dog will probably not perform the command as well. Why? Because it’s a new location with new distractions. Go back to the basics and consistently re-teach the behavior. Once you have trained your dog in numerous locations, the success in a new location will occur faster.

5. Pay attention to word-use

Dogs are actually quite simple. They try to react to the exact words you say. Therefore, you should know that “Off” or “No Jump” is not the same as “Down”. Which one do you want your dog to learn? Down is an entirely different command. Choose the word(s) you want to use and make sure you are consistent with your word-use as well as ensuring that all family use the same words.

6. Practice makes perfect

You have to learn patterns and consistency as much as your dog. Train your dog for at least 15 minutes per day broken down into small 2-5 minute segments...be consistent with your dog training

6 Thanksgiving Foods That Are Bad for Cats and Dogs

Dr. Jack Stephens
November 12, 2019

Thanksgiving is almost here and that means an abundance of delicious food. However, many popular human dishes aren't healthy for pets to consume. It's important to remember which foods are bad for dogs and cats. Especially, during holiday meals when dogs and cats beg for table scraps and guests might fall for those cute faces.

Below are six Thanksgiving foods bad for cats and dogs. Make sure to keep these away from your pets to ensure they remain healthy this Thanksgiving. Also, don't forget to inform your family and dinner guests about these potentially dangerous or toxic foods for pets so they do not feed them to your four-legged family members.

1. Stuffing

Thanksgiving dressing is often made with onions, scallions or garlic. These ingredients, however, are extremely toxic to dogs and cats and can cause a life-threatening anemia (destruction of the red blood cells). It's best to avoid feeding any amount of stuffing to pets.

2. Ham

Ham and other pork products can cause pancreatitis, upset stomach, vomiting and diarrhea. Pork is also high in fat, which can lead to obesity in pets. Even a small amount of ham can contribute a very large amount of calories to a small dog or cat's diet.

3. Turkey Bones

Bones can cause severe indigestion in dogs and cats, potentially causing vomiting and obstructing the bowel. Bones may also splinter and cause damage to the inside of the stomach and intestines. In some cases, turkey bones may even puncture through the stomach and cause a potentially fatal abdominal infection.

4. Mashed Potatoes

While potatoes are safe for pets to eat, mashed potatoes usually contain butter and milk, which can cause diarrhea in lactose intolerant pets. Additionally, some recipes call for onion powder or garlic, which are very toxic to pets.

5. Salads with Grapes/Raisins

There are many salads served at Thanksgiving that include grapes or raisins as an ingredient, from fruit salad, to waldorf salad, to ambrosia. However, grapes and raisins are very virulent and potentially deadly. Grapes can cause severe, irreversible and sometimes fatal kidney failure in dogs. Be sure to keep all dishes that include grapes and raisins away from pets.

6. Chocolate Desserts

While pumpkin pie is the most famous Thanksgiving dessert (canned pumpkin also has many pet health benefits), many people offer a variety of chocolate desserts at Thanksgiving. Chocolate is toxic to dogs and cats, yet dogs love the smell and taste of it. The darker the chocolate, the more toxic it is. Keep all chocolate desserts out of the reach of pets to prevent an emergency trip to the veterinarian.

If your pets ingest any of these foods this Thanksgiving, be sure to call your veterinarian immediately. The most important part of holiday pet safety is early action, which may prevent more costly and serious complications from developing. Have a happy and safe Thanksgiving!

Dec 19
Animal Inn

I've been fielding questions about winter items that can help wear down our dog's energy level while staying indoors. Seek, scent work and of course Lisa's snuffle mats are all good to wear out your dog mentally without braving the elements for this winter season. We have some exercises planned this month that are both inexpensive yet fun activities you can perform with your dog over the upcoming months. As many of you are realizing without training our GSD's go in the wrong direction or drive us nuts with their seemingly unending energy levels. Come train with the GSD Club that knows GSD's!

This month we return indoors at Animal Inn. We follow their COVID procedures already in place for indoor work plus taking everyone's temperature while practicing social distancing. The Workshop is next Saturday the 21st. The lecture will be at 10 am followed by the hands-on portion at 11am. The afternoon class, (for ANYONE that has been to a morning session), will follow at 12:30pm. This month we'll work further on off-leash work, hand signals, improved heeling and everyone's favorite, Directed Jumping. We'll add beginning and problem solving jumping for those working towards Open titles and of course winter games that utilize our GSD's mental capabilities. The last item for the afternoon class is dominance over obedience to teach your GSD to live with cats, squirrels, bunnies and any other variety of pets in the home. It has been a popular topic for privates and workshops over the summer as families were forced to spend the days together.

Our new black or grey stocking hats are now in stock. They have a subtle GSD head over an outline of the state of MN. Very nice and are priced at $20.00. Pictures can be found on our Facebook page at <https://www.facebook.com/GermanShepherdtrainers>

If you're new to the workshops, please contact Ron to discuss which class is right for you and any issues ahead of time.
